

THE sale of the Rainbow 1 Satellite to Echostar Communication would be a disservice to the people of the United States of America. Echostar has promised years past to be the leader in providing HD programming to it's subscribers. I have wasted money on purchasing their receivers because they have not lived up to the promise of delivering HD content.

This sale will hurt the public by not offering them an alternative to the other two satellite companies nor any other cable provider for the purpose of watching HD content. VOOM has opened the door to a new world of entertainment and the sale of this satellite will close the door shut leaving consumers no alternative service which carries an abundance of HD. VOOM is concentrating on delivering not only the most HD content but in addition all SD channels carried by all providers at a price that is competitive with all other providers. VOOM has a better pricing structure to Direct TV, DishNetwork and any Cable provider (at least cox communications).

Without a third satellite company as an alternative service, Direct TV and Dish Network will continue to raise prices and not offer additional programming.

Please vote against the sale of the Rainbow 1 satellite to Echostar Communications.
